...and anyone who wants to know about toxic mold!

Dear Colleagues,

The questions surrounding mold continue. What is the proper amount of testing, if any? What should be tested? How should testing be conducted? What type of insurance coverage do I need? Can I get insurance coverage? What do I pay on this claim? Technical skills, legal savvy and creativity are needed to address these questions.

Jonathan D. Crumly, Sr., Esq.
Program Chair

Mold litigation has not gone away either, despite many new developments in the scientific studies on health impacts of exposure to mold in an indoor environment. At this Seminar, you will have the opportunity to hear from the attorney for the Plaintiff who obtained a $556,000 jury verdict against a heating and air conditioning company in a mold case tried in Fulton County, Georgia. In addition to insights from attorneys on both sides of the aisle in mold litigation, you will hear from experienced professionals who deal with mold on a regular basis.

We have assembled a group of experienced professionals and lawyers for this special Toxic Mold Seminar, which is designed to benefit a broad array of professionals and will cover many issues beyond the basics of mold and mold litigation. This Seminar will present useful information that will help you and your clients implement strategies to effectively address the complicated issues that arise in presenting and defending a mold claim. If you have handled a mold claim, participated in a mold claim or fear one is on your horizon, you will benefit from this Seminar.

I look forward to seeing you there.

Sincerely,

Jonathan D. Crumly, Sr., Esq., Program Chair
