No one can dispute that intellectual property has played a key role in the global business world. Because IP issues arise in so many common transactions, all lawyers should have knowledge of the basics. Those who specialize should also have a firm grasp on the basics as a foundation for more complex transactions. This Seminar offers a back-to-basics approach to intellectual property law, which will give you the practical and legal fundamentals you need in the areas of patent, copyright, and trademark. You'll spend the day with the region's top IP practitioners learning about the general issues you're likely to encounter. At the end of the day, you'll take with you the certainty that you have received the best in continuing legal education.

Program Chair

Jon Tandler specializes in copyright and publishing law, and counsels a number of businesses and individuals throughout the United States. His work in these areas includes preparing corporate agreements and licenses for acquiring and exploiting content and other intellectual properties in print, electronic, and broadcast media, and negotiating and documenting commercial and consumer software transactions. He also serves as outside counsel to start-up and established businesses.

Mark W. Fischer practices complex intellectual property and commercial litigation, representing a broad range of clients. He has also represented clients in jury trials involving breach of contract, real estate fraud, first amendment rights, business trade secrets, and breach of fiduciary duty. His experience includes extensive litigation in federal court.

Michael A. DeSanctis focuses on intellectual property matters, particularly as they concern patent rights. He has negotiated and prepared a wide variety of agreements. He has represented both early stage high-tech companies and established industry leaders, such as Intel Corporation, Sun Microsystems, IBM, eBay, and Apple Computers.

James E. Hartley has been a trial lawyer since 1974. His areas of practice have been antitrust litigation and counseling, and patent infringement litigation. For over 25 years, he has served as regional copyright counsel for the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

Jane Michaels specializes in intellectual property and commercial litigation, with an emphasis on telecommunications and computer industry cases. She has been a trial lawyer for more than 20 years. She is a Fellow of The American College of Trial Lawyers and is listed in Best Lawyers in America.

Lindsay Moore specializes in strategy, planning, knowledge management, business ethics, regulatory compliance, and the management of intellectual capital assets. She is also a Professor of Law at George Washington University Law School, where she teaches legal strategy and intellectual asset management.

Ian L. Saffer specializes in IP litigation and counseling, including patent, trademark, copyright, and trade secret matters. He advises clients in the sports and entertainment industries, including the Denver Broncos. He also advises clients in the semiconductor and telecom industries.

Donald L. Samuels practices all aspects of civil litigation, with an emphasis on employment and intellectual property law. He has litigated trademark, copyright, patent and trade secret cases in both federal and state courts throughout the United States.

David J. Stephenson, Jr., focuses on trademark and copyright registration, licensing, and maintenance, and litigates infringement cases. He has extensive experience in general commercial litigation, appeals, and American Indian law. He has published many articles on IP law and has testified internationally as an expert witness.

David A. Weinstein practices trademark and copyright law matters in the United States and internationally. He was formerly a Trademark Attorney at the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. He is author of two books, and has worked as a legal consultant on intellectual property issues in Bulgaria, Egypt, Serbia and Ethiopia.
