Find out Why Good Storytellers Make Great Lawyers

September 15, 2006 • Hyatt Regency Downtown • Tampa

“Took seminar—got agent—got Disney deal.”

David Self, Bourne Identity,
Road to Perdition, Thirteen Days

“The best CLE presentation I have attended in 25 years. If I could turn back time, I would enroll at UCLA and study this art form. Richard Walter is a superb teacher. Thank you for this interesting and challenging day.”

Linda McIntyre, Del Ray, FL

“If you wish to take your experience in life and law and meld it into written art, this is great!”

George J.F. Werner, Clearwater, FL

“[I] expected it to be informative. [I] did not expect it to be so inspirational.”

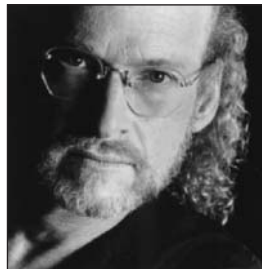

Greg Galloway, Lake Buena Vista, FL

“Very informative and the kindness of the Professor in giving his time to read a screenplay or helping out with guidance is very much appreciated.”

Aileen Josephs, West Palm Beach, FL

Dear Colleague,

Lawyers and screenwriters confront the same task: they place themselves in the minds and bodies of other people, and act and think as those people would act and think. Lawyers have to do this with their clients, partners, and adversaries. Screenwriters have to do this with the characters in their movies and also with the characters in the movie business: agents, producers, actors and directors.

Richard Walter

I am a trained actor and an experienced public speaker, and I promise this Seminar will be an engaging, provocative, expansive course with hands-on advice on not only overarching precepts, but also nuts and bolts.

As part of the Seminar, we will examine at close range the first two pages of several attendees' submissions. The Seminar is in this regard like an art gallery, wherein viewers can observe an entire painting from across the room in order to assess its shape and other general aspects, and then move up inches before it to examine the artist's individual brushstrokes.

I will provide three principles that represent a foolproof, waterproof, shockproof guarantee of success if they are faithfully followed. Sound like a lot of hype? If past is prologue, everyone in the room will agree with me at the end of the day that I have given them all they need to know in order to achieve creative and professional success as a screenwriter and lawyer.

I look forward to spending the day with you.

meet your instructor

Meet the person The Wall Street Journal calls —
"... the prime broker for one of Hollywood's hottest commodities ... student writers."

Richard Walter is a Professor at UCLA and is the Chair of the Screenwriting Section in the University's Department of Film, Television, and Digital Media. He has written numerous feature assignments for the major studios and has sold material to all three networks. He lectures on screenwriting throughout the United States and around the world, and has toured The People's Republic of China, the Middle East, Rio de Janeiro, Mexico, Spain, Hong Kong, Vancouver and Toronto.

He is a life member of the Writers Guild of America. He regularly appears on MSNBC's Hardball with Chris Matthews, and has also appeared on Wall Street Week, The O'Reilly Factor, The Today Show, Capital Report, and many other programs discussing media and screenwriting issues. Current movies written by Professor Walter's former students include: War of the Worlds, Alexander, Sideways, National Treasure, Fight Club, About Schmidt, and Under the Tuscan Sun.

The Wall Street Journal describes him as ... "a demanding taskmaster, with a sure eye for both dramatic coherence and a good sell ... UCLA has taken the lead in professional screenwriting largely because Mr. Walter established a writing program geared directly to the sometimes ungentle art of producing salable movie and television screenplays."

At this Seminar, Richard Walter will distill his entire two-year UCLA Screenwriting Program into one day. He'll hammer home the essential principles that explain the huge success of his students.
